Newsletter #9
Autumn 2012

On the blog

We headed across Dartmoor this summer, in one of the rare windows of good weather. Read about our trip on our blog: <http://bit.ly/SYgguy>

The Saturday Walkers club

The London-based Saturday Walkers club organises country walks at weekends (and occasionally on Wednesdays) in southeast England. All the walks start and finish at train stations about an hour away from central London.

The walks are posted on the club's website. All walks are free, and everyone is welcome. They are self-led walks – every walker is expected to have a copy of the route (either the appropriate book or a printout).

The club has no leaders or officers, no membership fees, no bank account, and no legal existence. Full details about the group, including the walks for a particular week, can be found at www.walkingclub.org.uk

Are you in a car-free walking group? Let us know and we will give you a mention in future newsletters.

Car-Free in the Lakes

The Lake District National Park has launched a car-free campaign.

Prize draw

The prize for our next quarterly draw is a 12-month subscription to TGO Magazine – one of the UK's leading monthly hillwalking magazines. Written for hill walkers by hill walkers, TGO provides a fresh and vital read for people who share a passion for the great outdoors.

To enter, simply submit a walk to our database before the end of December.

Congratulations to the winners of the last prize draw; your Onya picnic packs are on their way to you now.

Beachy Head lighthouse

The East Sussex coast

The South Downs between Brighton and Eastbourne are the spiritual home of Car Free Walks; the website was thought through during long walks around Lewes, Beachy Head and the Seven Sisters. This two-day walk takes in some of the region's highlights. <http://bit.ly/P84Zwe>
